Read the passage and answer the questions that follow (1-3):

The elephant is a perpetual nomad. Being a very large and herbivorous animal, it needs vast areas to roam: constantly browsing, foraging, moving from place to place in search of food and water with the changing seasons. Elephants in India are primarily threatened because of habitat loss, shrinkage and degradation. The growing infrastructural and agricultural needs of India's burgeoning human population have led to increasing encroachment within and around elephant habitat, resulting in the fragmentation of wild habitats and a loss of the traditional movement paths of elephants.

This has forced elephants to move through human-use areas, contributing to increased human-elephant conflict, which often leads to loss of human and elephant lives. There are an estimated 30,000 wild elephants in India according to the Ministry of Environment study of 2012. This accounts for around 60% of the global population of Asian elephants, which has declined by about half, in just the last 60-odd years.

We can help this situation by spreading awareness about the importance of elephant corridors. These are traditional migratory paths that elephant herds have used for centuries, their location passed down from generation to generation. The Wild Life Trust (WTI), the government's Project Elephant and other NGOs have mapped 101 elephant corridors across the country. Protecting and securing these is of critical importance. Thus the WTI along with its partner NGO, are organizing the GajYatra, an awareness campaign to highlight the necessity of elephant corridors.

However, merely creating awareness is not enough. There is an urgent need for coordinated policy interventions and scientific land-use planning. Conservationists argue that without legal protection, these mapped corridors remain vulnerable to development projects such as highways, railways, and urban expansion. Legislative delays and lack of political will further complicate conservation efforts, leaving the corridors at the mercy of commercial interests.

Moreover, the plight of the elephant is a mirror to the broader challenges faced in balancing development and ecological preservation. As a keystone species, the elephant plays a critical role in maintaining forest ecosystems. Its decline signals a potential collapse of biodiversity in those regions. Unless immediate, long-term, and collaborative strategies are implemented, we may lose not just the elephant, but the rich natural heritage it symbolizes.

Read the poem and answer the questions that follow (4-6):

Take this kiss upon the brow!
And, in parting from you now,
Thus much let me avow —
You are not wrong, who deem
That my days have been a dream;
Yet if hope has flown away
In a night, or in a day,
In a vision, or in none,

Is it therefore the less gone?
 All that we see or seem
 Is but a dream within a dream.

I stand amid the roar
 Of a surf-tormented shore,
 And I hold within my hand
 Grains of the golden sand —
 How few! yet how they creep
 Through my fingers to the deep,
 While I weep — while I weep!
 O God! Can I not grasp
 Them with a tighter clasp?
 O God! can I not save
 One from the pitiless wave?
 Is all that we see or seem
 But a dream within a dream?
